Re: Use of IBM Specialty Engines/Processors

Dear [Redacted]

Thank you for your interest in IBM Specialty Engines. As you are aware, like any IBM Licensed Internal Code, this offering is subject to the IBM License Agreement for Machine Code (a copy of which may be found at http://www-947.ibm.com/systems/support/machine_warranties/machine_code.html).

As we have reason to be concerned you intend to utilize Specialty Engines to process unauthorized workload (workload beyond that for which the Specialty Engine was created and marketed by IBM), which would constitute a breach of the license, we will fulfill the specialty engines per your order only if you provide reasonable assurances you will comply with our agreements. Please confirm that you will operate these engines in compliance with your existing agreements with IBM, and specifically including that you will not run any workload on these specialty engines other than those workloads expressly designated by IBM as eligible and authorized to run on these processors.

For your convenience, the product announcement letters summarizing eligible workload may be found at:

<http://www-03.ibm.com/systems/z/advantages/zaap/index.html> and
<http://www-03.ibm.com/systems/z/advantages/ziip/index.html>.

Please acknowledge your assurance of compliance by executing and returning a copy of this letter to my attention. Thank you again for your interest.

Sincerely,

Mark S. Anzani
VP and Chief Technology Officer, IBM System z
